Get In A Quick 10

This quick activity is a fun and interactive way to elicit multiple repetitions of target articulation sounds. Each grid houses 10 spaces to make tracking Speech progress a breeze.
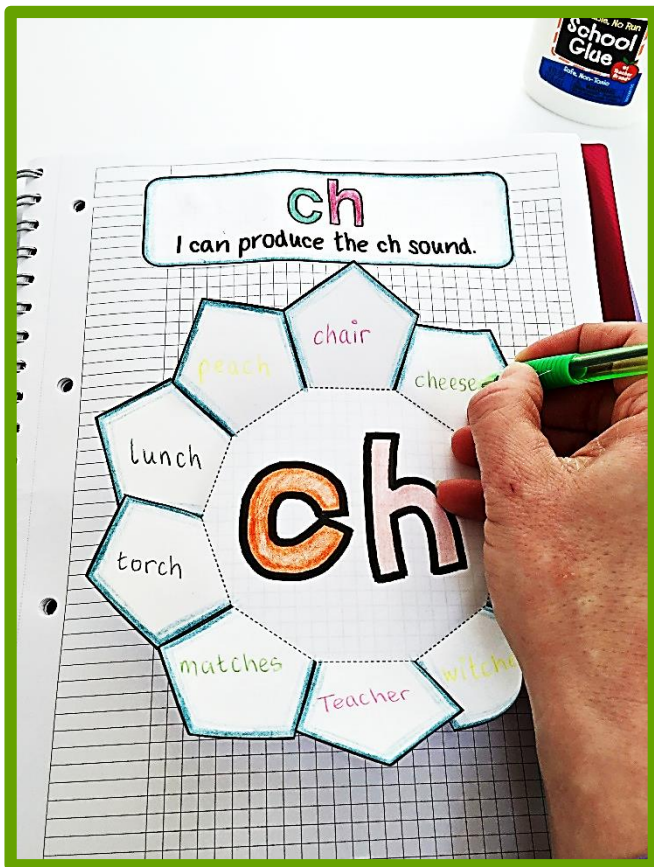

There are several ways that you can use these templates.

The page with mini-images can be used for non-readers....

I can produce the r sound.

For older students use the blank templates & have them write in their words. Or you can use the editable file to insert your own text. The font used on that page is called "Tahoma".

To assemble your project, cut along the solid lines and glue down the center section only into a notebook. Then fold the flaps inward to create a flower petal effect as your student practices.
