Dear Members,

The colors outside are beginning to change and school is officially underway. I hope it's been a great start for everyone, but if you feel it's been an uphill battle, make sure to check out this month's #SLPMeTime. We'll discuss some techniques to help you learn to step back to "breathe" from time to time.

We've got lots of great materials for you this month as well. Browse through and be taken to your youth with my fun nursery rhyme notebook resources.

Your students will love learning to rhyme using the interactive activities that are just the right size for their tiny hands. And you will love the look of joy on their faces as they are learning these favorite pastimes for the first time!

You can also find many popular themed activities to use this month such as Fall, Halloween, and Outer Space.

I hope you enjoy...until nexttime!

#SLPMETIME

Being an SLP is a demanding role and sometimes we can find ourselves in a position where the job spills over into everyday life.

Family time, hobby time, work out time, or just “me” time! We need this in our lives to be an effective SLP. Notebookers support each other to hold space in our lives to nurture our physical and mental health.

Have you found the first few weeks of school a challenge? Perhaps you feel you need some help to recapture that Summer zen?

“Your calm mind is your ultimate weapon against your challenges.”

There are many tools we can use to calm the mind but when I came across this one recently, it reminded me of my dear grandmother who always carried a pebble from the beach in her pocket.

“Such a simple thing and yet something the zen masters do the world over is to carry a pebble in your pocket. Do this and each time you put your hand in your pocket, hold the pebble gently and let it serve as a reminder to pause, smile and to gently breathe in and out.”

"I have used Notebooks with so many different children I see - as a mobile therapist, it gives me a great tool for both providing homework and staying in communication with parents. I really do use this resource everyday."

We love to hear your feedback! Let our team know what you love and what you need and we can make sure that each and every month in the Notebooks Club gives exactly what you need to do a great job!
