Dear Members,

Welcome to the February Edition of your Notebook Magazine! Every month in the pages of this magazine, we walk you through a selection of the therapy materials that are available to you with your private members access pass.

Make sure you are logged into your account and then click on any of the links in the magazine pages to go directly to your materials.

February is the month of love! Be sure to check out all of the Valentine's Day themed resources to use with your students. Being the month of love though, maybe you have a special date night planned or some family time?

For me, February is always about reconnection. The holidays are over and we are through the January blues. It's a great time to send some catch up messages to friends. During this month, why not take some time to connect with your teaching colleagues and with your fellow SLPs? In this edition of #SLPMeTime, I share a beautiful email I received telling me exactly what happened when one SLP did just that.

Until Next Time, Kathryn

VALENTINE'S

DENTAL HEALTH

In February 2018, those of you who have been subscribed to my newsletters for a while might remember, instead of my usual quick notices of sales and events, I made a vow to reconnect with my fellow SLPs. Every Saturday for the month of February, I sent longer and more personalized messages, in the style of traditional letter writing.

The response was amazing. So many SLPs wrote back to me to tell me how they had also been feeling disconnected from friends and colleagues. In the busy everyday schedule it is easy to lose the importance of a simple conversation.

As SLPs though, when we reflect, we know there is truly nothing more important than communication. We also know that through communication comes connection - something we all need for our wellbeing.

So in this edition of #SLPMeTime, I want to share with you an email that I received last year. It has a powerful message about how we interact with our colleagues and the value we put on that time...

"I am at school for a snow day with no kiddos. I am loving hearing from my coworkers about the new airfryer or instapot recipe that they just tried this weekend for the Super Bowl. Then..... all of a sudden.... BOOM! I am covered in guilt that I am not in my room writing IEPs that were due last week (we were suddenly hit with snow and ice last week so we could not even get to the school) or finishing my progress reports that go home this week--(and lets be totally honest! Not FINISHING I mean starting!!!)

I hate that feeling. I want to connect with the teachers in my school so that they are more comfortable with me coming into their room when we share students.

How can we effectively co-teach if we don't even know who each other are and what we find important TO teach!! How will they ever come to me and ask for advice about a severely apraxic student if they don't even know me because I spend every working moment holed up in my room on my computer documenting, documenting, documenting!

Thank you for this reminder. Today, I give myself permission to talk! To talk and laugh and share, a day of "being a part of a wonderful faculty!" I hope you too have a wonderful day!!"

When I read that message it truly warmed my heart. I hope in sharing it with you today that you also give yourself permission to talk. And I hope that you all have a wonderful February!

NOTEBOOKERS SAY

These are AWESOME! Love how easy they are to prepare and my students can take them home for practice when they are ready! VERY handy and useful!!!!

My kids love being able to use their "own books" in speech. I love letting them make them the week before a holiday or break and encouraging them to look through their books over the break to practice their sounds.

Love these as an awesome instruction tool for drill and practice as well as homework!

We love to hear your feedback! Let our team know what you love and what you need and we can make sure that each and every resource in the Notebooks Club gives exactly what you need to do a great job!
